New (and not so new) Programs at Professional Community Services

The Relationship Training Institute (RTI), a 501(c)(3) not-for-profit corporation, is very pleased to announce its ownership of the community mental health clinic Professional Community Services (PCS), in El Cajon, California, and its 130 domestic violence offenders. Co-directed by David Wexler and James Reavis, and clinically directed by Stacy Buhbe, PCS will continue to provide state-of-the-science domestic violence treatment, and will also offer programs for violent offenders, child physical abusers, stalkers, and general offenders in need of cognitive-behavioral treatment.

Each defendant accepted into the program will be evaluated clinically, and will have his or her risk for recidivism appraised. This information will be communicated to the probation officer and the Court, and will also be used to generate treatment interventions. We look forward with great excitement to working in a Containment Model of offender management with probation officers and the Court.

Professional Community Services will continue to offer affordable general mental health services and counseling programs for individuals, couples, and families.
